

Garth Paltridge and the Greens

Garth Paltridge looks like a genuine climate scientist, rather like Murry Salby who has explained that anyone who thinks that the science of climate change is delusional.

He has written a book on the climate change caper that can be obtained on line.

I am hoping that this book will shed some light on the way the no-growth wreckers moved on from nuclear power to the climate change caper. Of course the big difference between the anti-nuclear push was that they could only call on cranks from the community of scientists, while in contrast the climate caper has recruited scientists en masse.

This calls for some serious work on the sociology and politics of the science professions as they evolved over the last few decades.

Another handy volume is "The Greens" which is essential reading for open minded Green voters before the next election.
