

Letter to the Editor

The Letters Editor,

The High Priest Speaks.

The Australian high priest of climate change, Ross Garnaut acknowledges that there are a number of scientists who disagree with the IPCC. But he states that: "The outsiders [as he calls dissenters to the views of the IPCC], to climate science have no rational choice but to accept that, on a balance of probabilities, the mainstream science is right in pointing to high risks from unmitigated [Oxford Dictionary... not modified, absolute], climate change."

In science, [says Bob Parks Professor of Physics at the University of Maryland], refuting an accepted belief is celebrated as an advance in knowledge; in religion it is condemned as heresy.

So it does not take a Philadelphia Lawyer to see that His Eminence, Climate Change Czar Garnaut is indeed the Canberra anointed High Priest of the new religion.

Interested readers can read Ian McFadyen's essay in September's Quadrant magazine titled: "Our New Established Religion." The magazine also features Ray Evans' Essay titled: "Satanic Gas: the Politics of Carbon Dioxide".

Ronald Kitching
QLD, Australia.

7 October 2008